

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH

1770 — 1850

the child is father of the man: and i could wish my days to be bound each to each by natural piety: there was a time when meadow: grove: and stream: the earth: and every common sight to me did seem appareled in celestial light: the glory and the freshness of a dream: it is not now as it hath been of yore: turn whereso'er i may: by night or day: the things which i have seen i now can see no more: the rainbow comes and goes and lovely is the rose: the moon doth with delight look round her when the heavens are bare: waters on a starry night are beautiful and fair: the sunshine is a glorious birth: but yet i know: where'er i go: that there hath past away a glory from the earth: then sing: ye birds: sing: sing a joyous song: and let the young lambs bound as to the tabor's sound: we in thought will join your throng: ye that pipe and ye that play: ye that through your hearts today feel the gladness of the may: what though the radiance which was once so bright be now for ever taken from my sight: though nothing can bring back the hour of splendour in the grass: of glory in the flower: we will grieve not:

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH

1770 — 1850

the child is father of the man: and i could wish my days to be bound each to each by natural piety: there was a time when meadow: grove: and stream: the earth: and every common sight to me did seem appareled in celestial light: the glory and the freshness of a dream: it is not now as it hath been of yore: turn whereso'er i may: by night or day: the things which i have seen i now can see no more: the rainbow comes and goes and lovely is the rose: the moon doth with delight look round her when the heavens are bare: waters on a starry night are beautiful and fair: the sunshine is a glorious birth: but yet i know: where'er i go: that there hath past away a glory from the earth: then sing: ye birds: sing: sing a joyous song: and let the young lambs bound as to the tabor's sound: we in thought will join your throng: ye that pipe and ye that play: ye that through your hearts today feel the gladness of the may: what though the radiance which was once so bright be now for ever taken from my sight: though nothing can bring back the hour of splendour in the grass: of glory in the flower: we will grieve not:

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH

1770 — 1850

the child is father of the man: and i could wish my days to be bound each to each by natural piety: there was a time when meadow: grove: and stream: the earth: and every common sight to me did seem appareled in celestial light: the glory and the freshness of a dream: it is not now as it hath been of yore: turn whereso'er i may: by night or day: the things which i have seen i now can see no more: the rainbow comes and goes and lovely is the rose: the moon doth with delight look round her when the heavens are bare: waters on a starry night are beautiful and fair: the sunshine is a glorious birth: but yet i know: where'er i go: that there hath past away a glory from the earth: then sing: ye birds: sing: sing a joyous song: and let the young lambs bound as to the tabor's sound: we in thought will join your throng: ye that pipe and ye that play: ye that through your hearts today feel the gladness of the may: what though the radiance which was once so bright be now for ever taken from my sight: though nothing can bring back the hour of splendour in the grass: of glory in the flower: we will grieve not:

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH

1770 — 1850

the child is father of the man: and i could wish my days to be bound each to each by natural piety: there was a time when meadow: grove: and stream: the earth: and every common sight to me did seem appareled in celestial light: the glory and the freshness of a dream: it is not now as it hath been of yore: turn whereso'er i may: by night or day: the things which i have seen i now can see no more: the rainbow comes and goes and lovely is the rose: the moon doth with delight look round her when the heavens are bare: waters on a starry night are beautiful and fair: the sunshine is a glorious birth: but yet i know: where'er i go: that there hath past away a glory from the earth: then sing: ye birds: sing: sing a joyous song: and let the young lambs bound as to the tabor's sound: we in thought will join your throng: ye that pipe and ye that play: ye that through your hearts today feel the gladness of the may: what though the radiance which was once so bright be now for ever taken from my sight: though nothing can bring back the hour of splendour in the grass: of glory in the flower: we will grieve not:

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH

1770 — 1850

the child is father of the man: and i could wish my days to be bound each to each by natural piety: there was a time when meadow: grove: and stream: the earth: and every common sight to me did seem appareled in celestial light: the glory and the freshness of a dream: it is not now as it hath been of yore: turn whereso'er i may: by night or day: the things which i have seen i now can see no more: the rainbow comes and goes and lovely is the rose: the moon doth with delight look round her when the heavens are bare: waters on a starry night are beautiful and fair: the sunshine is a glorious birth: but yet i know: where'er i go: that there hath past away a glory from the earth: then sing: ye birds: sing: sing a joyous song: and let the young lambs bound as to the tabor's sound: we in thought will join your throng: ye that pipe and ye that play: ye that through your hearts today feel the gladness of the may: what though the radiance which was once so bright be now for ever taken from my sight: though nothing can bring back the hour of splendour in the grass: of glory in the flower: we will grieve not:

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH

1770 — 1850

the child is father of the man: and i could wish my days to be bound each to each by natural piety: there was a time when meadow: grove: and stream: the earth: and every common sight to me did seem appareled in celestial light: the glory and the freshness of a dream: it is not now as it hath been of yore: turn whereso'er i may: by night or day: the things which i have seen i now can see no more: the rainbow comes and goes and lovely is the rose: the moon doth with delight look round her when the heavens are bare: waters on a starry night are beautiful and fair: the sunshine is a glorious birth: but yet i know: where'er i go: that there hath past away a glory from the earth: then sing: ye birds: sing: sing a joyous song: and let the young lambs bound as to the tabor's sound: we in thought will join your throng: ye that pipe and ye that play: ye that through your hearts today feel the gladness of the may: what though the radiance which was once so bright be now for ever taken from my sight: though nothing can bring back the hour of splendour in the grass: of glory in the flower: we will grieve not:

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH

1770 — 1850

the child is father of the man: and i could wish my days to be bound each to each by natural piety: there was a time when meadow: grove: and stream: the earth: and every common sight to me did seem appareled in celestial light: the glory and the freshness of a dream: it is not now as it hath been of yore: turn whereso'er i may: by night or day: the things which i have seen i now can see no more: the rainbow comes and goes and lovely is the rose: the moon doth with delight look round her when the heavens are bare: waters on a starry night are beautiful and fair: the sunshine is a glorious birth: but yet i know: where'er i go: that there hath past away a glory from the earth: then sing: ye birds: sing: sing a joyous song: and let the young lambs bound as to the tabor's sound: we in thought will join your throng: ye that pipe and ye that play: ye that through your hearts today feel the gladness of the may: what though the radiance which was once so bright be now for ever taken from my sight: though nothing can bring back the hour of splendour in the grass: of glory in the flower: we will grieve not:

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH

1770 — 1850

the child is father of the man: and i could wish my days to be bound each to each by natural piety: there was a time when meadow: grove: and stream: the earth: and every common sight to me did seem appareled in celestial light: the glory and the freshness of a dream: it is not now as it hath been of yore:
turn whereso'er i may: by night or day: the things which i have seen i now can see no more: the rainbow comes and goes and lovely is the rose: the moon doth with delight look round her when the heavens are bare: waters on a starry night are beautiful and fair: the sunshine is a glorious birth: but yet i know: where'er i go: that there hath past away a glory from the earth: then sing: ye birds: sing: sing a joyous song: and let the young lambs bound as to the tabor's sound: we in thought will join your throng: ye that pipe and ye that play: ye that through your hearts today feel the gladness of the day: what though the radiance which was once so bright be now for ever taken from my sight: though nothing can bring back the hour of splendour in the grass: of glory in the flower: we will
grieve not:

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH

1770 — 1850

the child is father of the man: and i could wish my days to be bound each to each by natural piety: there was a time when
meadow: grove: and stream: the earth: and every common sight to me did seem appareled in celestial light: the glory and
the freshness of a dream: it is not now as it hath been of yore:
turn whereso'er i may: by night or day: the things which i have seen i now can see no more: the rainbow comes and goes
and lovely is the rose: the moon doth with delight look round
her when the heavens are bare: waters on a starry night are beautiful and fair: the sunshine is a glorious birth: but yet i know: where'er i go: that there hath past away a glory from the earth: then sing: ye birds: sing: sing a joyous song: and let
the young lambs bound as to the tabor's sound: we in thought will join your throng: ye that pipe and ye that play: ye that through your hearts today feel the gladness of the
though the radiance which was once so bright be taken from my sight: though nothing can bring back of splendour in the grass: of glory in the flower: we will
grieve not:

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH

1770 — 1850

the child is father of the man: and i could wish my days to be bound each to each by natural piety: there was a time when
meadow: grove: and stream: the earth: and every common sight to me did seem appareled in celestial light: the glory and
the freshness of a dream: it is not now as it hath been of yore:
turn whereso'er i may: by night or day: the things which i have seen i now can see no more: the rainbow comes and goes
and lovely is the rose: the moon doth with delight look round
her when the heavens are bare: waters on a starry night are beautiful and fair: the sunshine is a glorious birth: but yet i know: where'er i go: that there hath past away a glory from the earth: then sing: ye birds: sing: sing a joyous song: and let
the young lambs bound as to the tabor's sound: we in thought will join your throng: ye that pipe and ye that play: ye that
through your hearts today feel the gladness of the
though the radiance which was once so bright be taken from my sight: though nothing can bring back of splendour in the grass: of glory in the flower: we w

l
l

g
r
i e
v
e

n
o
t

NOTES:

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/William_Wordsworth