

I work nights: I cat nap every afternoon:
 Every so often: In the afternoon: A friend of mine might shepherd an autistic child they were caretaking to my house: One beautiful autistic child had a fondness for throwing pebbles into water: My Pen Ching yard with a hundred tiny trees in pots on tables had a river of pebbles under the tables and upon the paths: It was pebble Paradise: A few times in 1996: I'd be taking an afternoon nap on my bed on the floor next to my computer: The steamboat boiler red headed boy leaped onto my bed: As if it were a raft on a river: Land on his hands and knees: Squint wizened: When I said: "Hello?" Eye: Smile: To Open:
 He would run then into my living room and climb up the little ladder to the top of the double deck guest bed
 Then he jumped to the floor: Like Huckleberry Finn off his raft to the shore: Then he smiled: Big: Open.
 As Wide As Across The Wide Mississippi: At my dog sleeping in the bottom bunk: Then he would turn to the two big scenery flats by Peter Crompton from the forest In the Theater Of The Blue Rose production of Ubu Roi:
 He would say hello up to the six foot tree shaped like a pear: Stem and all: Then he said hello up to the six foot tree shaped like a horse: Ears and all: Then he'd run out of my living room: Through the kitchen: Out into thick pacific fog which might as well have been the terrific dank slow fog of the Mississippi bottoms: Out into my gracious old Pen Ching yard: Absolutely: Ignore the little elm with owl eyes: Ignore: The 80 year old dog shape trunked elm: Ignore: The dwarfed Akebono Cherry: So fat with white blossoms: A four hundred and fifty pound American Sumo wrestler is named for it:
 The boy sat: In the pebbles: For hours: He'd pick up pebbles: Drop them in a water bowl: Can we say he heard the sound?:
 Plop:
 Can we say he knew they were pebbles?: Can we say he was able to love the sounds of pebbles plopping into water?: We better fucking believe it we can: He also: Loved to sing out words: Whenever he left: He sang out: Loud: "Gooooouuoooddd bbbbbbbyyyyyyyyyyyyyyeye:" One day his father: A professor of Dead Education: Telephoned: I said I thought his son was a very beautiful person: And with his huge shock of red hair: Giant Head: Indian Pony Body: Animal Charms: Magnetisms: Happinesses: That he looked: And was just like: Huckleberry Finn: The father said: Yes: Huckleberry Finn is just about his:
